Giving advice

In the following slide, you're going to read four different profiles you came across on a website called wanderlust.com. Members look for recommendation on their next trip and you just found these four member descriptions.

Find them a suitable destination among the six options provided.

Jenny: Hi guys! I'm interested in going off-the-beaten track. I'm an adventurous person and I need to disconnect. However, I'm not into going to the typical destinations. I'm looking for a place in Europe that could fit.

Tom: I'm a spiritual guy. I'm Jewish and have been to Jerusalem. I want to discover other religions. I've been to India four times already.

Hélène: I don't speak English so I want a place where I could practice with the locals! I like going to the beach so rainy places are a big no-no for me! I'm looking for somewhere cheap but safe for women because I'd go solo traveling.

Jorge: You could say I suffer from wanderlust! I've been to so many countries as a tourist. Now I want to go on a volunteering trip to help people out. A developing country could be a good option. However, I'm not interested in any Asian countries as I've already helped there.
